

Senator Ron Johnson is spending the weeks before the 2012 elections sharing his message of the realities of America's economy, federal debt, and spending. He believes this information is crucial for every American to know. He uses numbers and charts to describe the problems we face and to point out the root cause of those problems - the size, scope, and cost of the federal government. As we face very distinct choices between greater freedom and prosperity or more government control of our businesses and our lives, the Senator's goal is to educate, inform, and persuade every possible citizen about the truth of these choices.
